Certificate Plan Adopted But Governor Says It Was Misused

TOPEKA, Aug. 1—Asserting that emergency rates, especially for feeds, are of imperative importance to small farmers in Kansas, Governor Alf M. Landon has succeeded in arranging a conference in Chicago on Monday to work out a plan for the immediate reduction of railroad rates on the movement of drought cattle and feeds.

Governor Landon arranged the conference in a telegram this afternoon to E. B. Boyd, chairman of the Western Trunk Line Committee, in Chicago, representing the railroads. The Governor suggested that representatives of the railroads, the State of Kansas and the Interstate Commerce Commission sit down Monday and work out a plan which meets the requirements of ICC.

The ICC recently prohibited the use of the certificate plan used in 1934 for emergency shipments of feeds at reduced rates. Under this plan, certificates were issued to farmers and feed merchants for emergency shipments of feeds. However, the Governor said, today, some of the feed merchants used the certificates to make shipments which were not of bona-fide emergency character.

The Governor will be represented at the conference by Homer Hoch, chairman of the Kansas Corporation Commission, and Dean Harry Umberger, of the Kansas State Agricultural College.

On behalf of the Governor, Hoch first asked the railroads for emergency rates for more than a week ago. At the beginning of this week, the Governor made another effort. But the ICC ruling against the certificate plan proved to be an obstacle.

As the Governor stated today, he saw no reason why this ruling should prevent the immediate establishment of emergency rates for the shipment of cattle to water or forage, or why a substitute plan could not be worked out for feeds.

Blazing Haystack
Keeps Firemen Busy

YARDLEY, Aug. 1—For more than three hours, Thursday afternoon, members of the Yardley Fire Company, No. 1, fought the scorching flames of a straw stack at the farm of Walter S. Farley, about a mile northwest of here. The flames were discovered by Farley, who had gone to the house to converse with some guests, and looking out of the window he was startled by the blaze.

Farley's son, Walter, Jr., 10 years of age accompanied by a cousin from Philadelphia, of the same age, were making their way to an outdoor fireplace to cook their suppers over the open grate, and during their journey were throwing matches at each other, and ignited the straw stack about 30 feet from the barn, garage, chicken houses, etc.

The well on the farm being dry, the water supply was obtained from a small spring in the meadow, which was dammed up by the firemen, and sufficient water was obtained to subdue the flames.

Sparks were carried distances of several feet, and great caution had to be exercised by the firemen to prevent further grass fire and igniting of nearby buildings. A spark lit on the hose carrier of the fire chemical engine, and ignited a number of hand towels, carried on the machine. This was discovered before any damage was done.

ROCK OF GIBRALTAR VAULT
READY FOR CASH HOARD

Located in U. S. Army Reservation and Ready for Billion Dollar Reserve

FINISHING TRIMMINGS

By C. L. Reece
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

FT. KNOX, Ky., Aug. 1—(INS)—Uncle Sam's newest and strongest gold hole, located on the U. S. Army reservation here, will be ready to receive the biggest gob o' nuggets ever transported in any country—the Klondike included—sometime next month.

And if a modern Jesse James has the foolish idea that he's going to climb aboard any of the special trains to get some of the six billion dollar cargo he had better spend a few more hours doing his plans, because the odds are six billion to one that someone will change his mind.

That "someone" is a corps of G-men, every constable and sheriff between here and New York, several hundreds of special guards, tons of concrete and steel, and 20,000 soldiers who would just as soon shoot a goldjacker as a target. For it's true what they say about the Fifth Corps Area being at Camp Knox when the bullion arrives—if it comes between August 1 and 15.

A mental hazard well worth any hoodlum's second thought.

The gold depository is completed except for trimmings, and has been inspected by Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the United States mint. After a survey of the vaults she termed the beautiful stone building that sticks its stocky head above reservation property "a rock of Gibraltar," and laughingly commented it was "a gold cold storage."

She wasn't wrong either, when she compared it to that chunk of stone on the southeast coast of Spain. In fact The Rock might blush in comparison. Under the direction of Engineer John W. Shorrock, workmen first dug a hole 105 feet by 121 feet, then allowed their huge scoops to dip 22 feet below the surface. Into this they put heavy lengths of steel, then poured concrete to a depth of 10 feet, forming a floor or mat strong enough to resist the staggering weight of $6,000,000,000 in gold and the most imaginative of efforts to tunnel under the cache.

Still thicker walls make the basement area 88 feet by 82 feet, in which there is one huge vault on the order of a bull-pen. This depository, centered so as to allow a walk around, is 63 feet by 30 feet, houses 14 separate vaults, and is approximately 25 feet high. Each of the smaller vaults bears a steel door, handle, a key lock and a padlock and when the treasure is placed inside a Treasury official will seal the padlock.

Another vault occupies most of the space on the first floor. It can be entered only through a steel door weighing 35 tons. There, an elevator operates between the first floor and the basement.

Pill boxes have been built in each corner of the vault yard, from which a marksman with a machine gun can rake the ground in all directions. The nests are connected by iron fences 10 feet high. Another pill box is located in the dome.

The exterior walls and roof are concrete, with facings of grey granite. The entrance is black granite with

ANNOUNCE REDUCTIONS IN LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE RATES

The seventh rate reduction in ten years affecting interstate long distance calls was filed today by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company with the Federal Communications Commission to take effect September 1st.

"This reduction, as was the previous one in January, is made possible by the present upward trend in long distance usage and by the operating results from the Bell System policy of continuous development and research to assure the public the maximum service at the lowest cost consistent with the financial safety of the business," says a statement by the company. During the ten years the station-to-station rate from New York to San Francisco has come down from $16.50 to $7.50 and the New York-Chicago rate from $4.65 to $2.50.

THE WORST OF TAX LAWS

[Reprinted from the Richmond (Va.) News Leader]

Fortunate in many things, President Roosevelt never was quite so lucky as in the fact the election of 1936 comes before the country begins to pay taxes under the amended revenue act.

Some provisions of that law are reasonable, but some are so incredibly harsh that they will produce a state of mind just one step short of rebellion.

Congress, we have no doubt, will be forced next January to correct the worst injustices of the law.

Many of the Congressmen who voted for that bill would not be in their seats then if their constituents realized, before the November election, how cruelly the Government punishes the corporation that impaired its capital during the depression and now seeks, as conditions improve, to restore the deficit.

Take, first, a corporation of $100,000 that fell behind by $10,000 in the tough years.

Assume that this corporation makes $12,000 in 1936. Instead of paying out $2,000 in dividends, it seeks to build up its working capital.

Because it makes no distribution of dividends and applies all earnings to wiping out its deficit, the Federal tax will be $2,632—or 21.9 per cent of net earnings, more than one-fifth.

Consider any corporation that has had a deficit of $5,000 and this year earns just enough to cover it.

That corporation, under the law, could pay no dividends, but for its provident action in doing the one thing it can do lawfully—makes good its deficit—it has to pay Uncle Sam $805 of the $5,000 it makes—16.1 per cent of net earnings.

Assume a corporation with a capital of $500,000 and a deficit of $80,000. This concern makes $60,000 in 1936—not enough to replace the loss on its capital account.

Yet if this corporation applies the $60,000 frugally to the reduction of its deficit, how does the Federal Government deal with it?

The tax bill of the corporation is $16,198—or 27 per cent of its entire net earnings.

Paying this tax, the corporation is able to reduce its deficit of $80,000 by no more than $43,802, though its stockholders get no dividends.

Take, on the other hand, a million-dollar corporation that entered 1936 with no deficit and this year earns $100,000.

As it does not require any additional working capital, it declares the full amount of its earnings, less taxes, as dividends.

It pays a "normal" corporation tax of $13,840—and no surtax.

In other words, its taxes are 13.8 per cent of net earnings, whereas those of a corporation half that size, struggling to restore its capital, will be greater in actual amount by $2,358, and, in percentage, double those of the larger concern.

Never, so far as we know, was there such shameful discrimination against the corporation of moderate size in the name of doctrinaire economics; never was business so punished for attempting to be solvent.

Unless the law is amended by the new Congress, as soon as that body convenes in January, thousands of corporations that made a good fight to keep alive during the depression will have to go through a needless and expensive reorganization.

Otherwise, they will be kept "in the red," to the permanent impairment of their credit, by a Government that pretends to mete out equal justice to all.

LOWER BUCKS FARMERS
DISCUSS CO-OPERATIONSpeakers Address Group On Dairy Marketing Ass'n
At Woodside

MAY FORM ASSOCIATION

WOODSIDE, Aug. 1—Several prominent speakers addressed a group of farmers interested in forming a dairy co-operative marketing association in the community house here.

Advice to the farmers as to the service rendered by a state extension service was given by Frank Manning, co-operative advisor from State College.

Mr. Manning advised the group to start at the bottom and build up the organization. The speaker declared that this group was the nucleus for a good organization and he emphasized the point that hard and consistent work would bring about the desired results. The speaker also spoke of the fine results obtained by the successful milk co-operatives now operating in Pennsylvania.

G. A. Boger, Allentown, president of the Lehigh Valley Co-operative Farmers, distributing milk from that section to various parts of the country, was the second speaker. He outlined the plans followed by his organization and said that the organization was serving a real purpose to the farmers there.

The main reason for failure in planning all co-operatives, according to Mr. Boger, is the fact that the farmers are unwilling to work together, to trust each other, and to give aid wherever possible.

Steps were taken at the close of the meeting to determine the amount of interest that exists in this section. The group present responded in a satisfactory manner, and a motion was carried to definitely look toward such a plan.

PLANS NOW UNDER WAY
TO HALT RIVER POLLUTIONWill Coordinate Federal, State, Interstate and Local Activities

STUDY NOW BEING MADE

HARRISBURG, Aug. 1—Thomas A. Logue, Secretary of Internal Affairs and also chairman of the Interstate Commission on the Delaware River Basin, today announced that plans to co-ordinate Federal, State, Interstate and local activities in water planning and development of the Delaware River Basin are now under way, and that the first step to be taken will be towards the abatement and prevention of pollution in the Delaware and its tributary drainage basin.

The commission, which is the outgrowth of the Regional Conference on Problems of the Delaware River Basin held in Philadelphia in April, represents 17 members and 4 states: Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Delaware. The Conference was held under a call issued by the Pennsylvania Commission on Interstate Co-operation and the Council of State Governments.

Already a study of legislation in the four states involved is under way at Philadelphia. The commission plans to prepare a legislative program for submission to the legislatures of the four states concerned in 1937.

Secretary Logue said, commenting on the commission: "The Interstate Commission on the Delaware River Basin is designed to put into effect a program which we hope will correlate and harmonize the viewpoints and recommendations contained in the various surveys and studies of the River made during the last fifty years. The combination of Federal, State and Interstate agencies is significant and it is our hope that, with the additional co-operation needed from local governments and from private agencies interested in the problems, a harmonious and practical program of action will result."

Garden Club Meets
At Goslin Residence

The Garden section of the Travel Club yesterday held its meeting at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Elwood Goslin. The members held a small flower show, each bringing an entry of a Summer arrangement of flowers. Mrs. V. V. Vansant placed first in this contest; Mrs. Griffith Williams, second; and Mrs. Mulford Callanan, third.

The speaker for the meeting was Robert B. McKenney, president of the Bucks County Dogwood Society, and resident of Newtown. Mr. McKenney stated that since this is the native State for dogwood, the society is trying to further the idea of planting it throughout this section of the country. With only a little interest and co-operation from the garden clubs in the State, the Society believes that it can add appreciably to the number of dogwoods in the State.

"Dogwoods are hardy and easy to transplant. The wood, fine-grained and very white, and once in a while there is a trace of delicate pink in the grain. There is nothing more beautiful than a pink flowering dogwood with tulips growing underneath it in the early Spring."

Montgomery county gave the idea of a Dogwood Society to Bucks county, and in this county the officers of the club are: President, Mr. McKenney; vice-president, Mrs. Harry K. Shoemaker; secretary, Mrs. J. B. Hare; treasurer, Mr. Isaac VanArtsdalen. These people are doing much toward increasing the number of dogwood throughout its native State, Pennsylvania.

He was last seen alive when he returned home late last night from a camp meeting at a nearby grove.

Spanish War Now
One of ExterminationBy H. R. Knickerbocker
I. N. S. Correspondent
(Copyright, I. N. S.)

Burgos, Headquarters of the Northern Rebel Army, Aug. 1—Spanish civil war became a war of extermination today as General Miguel Cabanellas, chief of the whites, proclaimed that the battle now raging would not cease until the Marxist forces have been completely annihilated.

Cabanellas said that the Spanish Marxist government in Madrid has cost the lives of 25,000 Spaniards, and he demanded that the men responsible for this holocaust be brought to the book.

Thus it becomes clear that if the whites win, the red government officials can look forward to death, while the whites are fully conscious that if they lose they go straight before a red firing squad.

FINAL SCORE IS 6 TO 4

After trailing the Riverton A. A. 4-1 for six and a half innings, the Landreth's Seeds put on batting rallies in the seventh and eighth innings and scored five runs and finally won 6-4.

The "Farmers" procured but two hits off Theurer during the first six innings but the third base play of Foulke saved him on more than one occasion. Foulke took a line drive from the bat of Joe Roe in the fifth and doubled Broderick, who had singled off first base. In the next inning he again stopped a promising rally, throwing out Heftman with some neat fielding and taking another line drive, this time one from the bat of Malmesbury.

Broderick led the "Farmers" in hitting, making three hits, one for three bases. Baker led the hitters for Riverton, he also making three.

SCOUT SHIP ELKS

YARDLEY WINS SECOND

Doylestown Finishes Third,
Scoring a Total of 13 Points

Skipper Fritz Herman steered his shipmates of the good ship "The Seascout Ship Elks" to first place for the water party conducted by the Bucks County Scouting Council. Mate Bob Wright was on "deck" navigating the motor dory of The Elks as one of the starting platforms for the events. The Elks home made an ideal spot to conduct the social party of the summer season of the Seascouts. A considerable number of local people were among the onlookers from the street and verandah of the Home.

The Bristol Ship scored thirty points with Yardley, Skipper William Whitehead, taking second place with nineteen points, Chairman of the Ship Committee of Doylestown, Hillborn Darlington, Sr., took third place with his ship, The Brigadier, with 13 points. Crocydon, Andalusia and Morrisville Ships were among "the missing." Most of the Langhorne Seascouts are at Buccoo-Perk could not make the trip down-county. Milford was represented.

Trips on the river were given by the Bristol Ship for their guests. Cruises were taken down to the Bristol-Burlington Bridge under the capable hand of Skipper Herman, and Mate Wright. The evening was concluded by a weener roast with ice lemonade and cake on the Island. The glowing light of the fire reflected the happy faces of Seascout and Mermaid enjoying a sociable evening together in a Scouting atmosphere.

Scout Executive William F. Livermore directed the Water Party with Neighborhood Commissioner William Amick as Judge, Chairman of the Doylestown Ship Hillborn Darlington, Sr., was the scorer of events. Skipper Fred Herman supervised the dock facilities, and Mate Robert Wright navigated the motor dory for the river side.

Champs from Bristol were in the large ball heave, 1st, Leonard Dyer, and in the carrying of a lighted candle, 1st, Wilbur Campbell, and 2nd, Winfield Herman. The mermaids of the Bristol Ship showed their ability for the home town unit in the candy scramble with Miss Dorothy Downing taking second place, and Bertha Cameron, placing third. Leonard Dyer, although known for his eating ability was not up to the capacity of the out-of-town Seascouts as he was only able to take a slow third in the ice cream treat.

The massive strength of Winfield Herman proved a real help to "Olde Bristol" by his defeating all-comers, and taking first place in the water tug. Yardley was too much for the Bristol bassies in the bath cap relay but the "locals" took second with the splendid swimming ability of the Misses Laura Cameron, and Dorothy Downing. The Seascout Relay Teams from Bristol were good through their taking both second and third. The teams comprising for second place Wilbur Campbell and Winfield Herman while third place the team-mates were Leonard Dyer and Paul Vandegrift.

The place ribbons were awarded by Neighborhood Commissioner William Amick accompanied by the cheers of the Seascout and Mermaid rosters. Thanks were frequently expressed for the generous co-operation of the Bristol Lodge of Elks for providing such convenient and hospitable facilities.

GAS AND DOZE

Every time an automobile gets into a smash-up these days, the police begin the investigation by asking, "Was the driver drunk?"

And the question, buzzing through the air with monotonous frequency, points to an angle of automobile driving that is going to need a whole lot of thought.

We never have handled the problem of the drunken driver with anything like intelligence; and, in theory at least, the problem has become more pressing than ever.

Everyone over the mental age of 7 years knows perfectly well that a drunken man has no business driving an automobile. It is equally a part of common knowledge that drunken people do drive autos every day and every night, and that so far we haven't found any very efficient way of keeping them from doing so.

We need to tackle the problem along two lines.

First, we need to build up a public sentiment that condemns drunken driving unequivocally and sternly. We need to recognize the plain fact that a drunk behind the wheel of a car is as much a menace to public safety as a maniac with a meat ax.

The chap who gets stiff and then climbs gaily into his car to drive home isn't a charming fellow who does amusing things; he is a potential killer, and we need a public opinion that will tell him so without hesitation.

Second, we need tighter laws to deal with the offense, and far stricter enforcement of them than most of our laws get. The penalty for driving while intoxicated ought to be heavy enough to make even the most carefree tippler pause; and it ought to be applied without any ifs, ands, or buts.

Gasoline and alcohol make a disastrous mixture. It's high time that we found some way of squelching the crack-brains who persist in trying to use it.

THE AIR LINE WAS RIGHT

We think Kenneth Romney, sergeant-at-arms of the House, would be well advised to drop the suit he threatens against an air line out of Chicago. The line refused to carry Representative Zioncheck of Seattle unless he were accompanied. Romney claims to have arranged a reservation in Washington, and thinks a suit now is in order.

With Zioncheck, in the tribulations for which he is not responsible, we have nothing but sympathy. On the other hand, an air line which knowingly accepts a passenger who is a person of proven instability is derelict in its duty to the public. There have been wrecks of liners for which the only feasible explanation was that a passenger got suddenly out of hand. A traveling party at the mercy of a wild man in the cramped quarters of a plane in flight is not a contingency of which we care to think.

If the line here was amiss in any way it was in booking a seat for the Congressman in the first place, assuming it knew the reservation was for him.

That dying-rail look doesn't mean daughter is sick. She has the radio turned soft and low on a crooner.

New York has dropped its state gas tax from 4 cents to 3, but nothing like that is deliberate. There has been absent-mindedness in Albany.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, Aug. 1.—If Governor Earle permits himself to be led into the use of personalities in the coming campaign he will have to accept the consequences of his own brashness.

That is the way political observers at the Capitol interpreted Senator Alonzo S. Batchelor's vigorous reply to the Governor's recent unjustified attempt to defame the Senator, whose only offense was that he refused to go along with the Earle plan to levy a huge burden of unnecessary taxes.

Batchelor did not overstate the case when he said that the Governor's attack on him "was about the foulest combination of vulgarity and falsehood an unprincipled mind could put into words."

The Governor has been using this type of political tactics ever since he was inaugurated, but because of respect for his office Republicans were reluctant to retaliate with material ready at hand.

This attitude being well known, observers were quick to see in the Batchelor speech evidences of a radical change of attitude and a sharp warning to the Governor not to overstep in the future.

The most significant paragraph in Senator Batchelor's speech, from the standpoint of these observers, was this:

"I say to the Governor of Pennsylvania that, with honesty and complete candor, I can reveal my private life, my personal life, to that child (the Senator's daughter) who heard him utter that villainous lie. (The Governor's assault on Batchelor's good name). I would like to ask the Governor of Pennsylvania whether, with the same complete candor, he would dare reveal his private life, his political life, to his children?"

Mulling that over political observers have come to the conclusion that Republican leaders have about reached the end of their patience.

The Pittsburgh-Post-Gazette sums up the situation in which the Governor now finds himself in a vigorous editorial under the caption, "Governor Being Stripped of Mask of Sanctity." The Post-Gazette pronounces the Governor's attitude that of "sheer effrontery."

A NEW DEAL POLITICAL JUDGE

Judge Harry Kalodner stepped into a wallow on the jaw in the Senate last week when it became known that the Judge, formerly Governor Earle's chief publicity agent, had assumed full personal responsibility for the whole of the so-called Earle tax and relief program. Democratic Senators who were thus put in the light of being mere political puppets, resented Kalodner's assumption of Supreme authority, and are still angry.

Kalodner's political activities were revealed at a meeting of the Senate Finance Committee to which had been invited spokesmen for the State Department of Revenue, Judge Kalodner walked into the room with the Revenue Department spokesmen and when one of them attempted to reply to a question by a Senator, was interrupted by the jurist-publicist of Philadelphia. "That is not right at all," said Kalodner brusquely.

"Just where do you come into this picture?" asked Senator G. Mason Owlett, member of the Committee. "Just why do you come in here and how do you know about all this?" Judge Kalodner's reply was a surprise to the Republican Senators.

"I prepared the whole administration program and I ought to know what was in my own mind." From that point on, almost completely disregarding the official spokesman of the Revenue Department, Judge Kalodner took up the defense of the Earle program, the one which he had admitted fathering.

PRISON LABOR—Prison labor at 10 cents a day has been working side by side with WPA labor at 40 to 75 cents an hour on a dam adjacent to the Rockview Prison in Centre County. It is reported here. Just how the WPA management pays prison wages and keeps within the federal wage regulations has not been explained. Anyway, it has been asked, why shouldn't idle workers have been given all the WPA work?

OLD KENTUCKY HOME—Pennsylvania quarry, sand, gravel and slag industries, which offer a considerable outlet for the employment of Pennsylvania labor in the preparation of their products, are growing increasingly peevish over the policies of Governor Earle's highway department. The Pennsylvanians say Earle is buying rock asphalt from Kentucky and Alabama at high prices, when satisfactory material can be had of Pennsylvania workers. The Pennsylvania industries hold that the money spent for one ton of out-of-State materials will purchase from one and one-half to three tons of Pennsylvania produced materials; and that with sixty cents of the highway dollar going to labor, this would seem to be, under the circumstances, an unfair deal for Pennsylvania labor.

WOMEN ARE AROUSED—Women voters, whose household allowances are being rapidly eaten up by rising prices due to New Deal taxes, are among the most active workers for Landon and Knox and the return of Republican control in the Legislature of their home State. The Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women is in the midst of an energetic campaign, with Mrs. Hannah M. Durham as Chairman of political activities. Mrs. Durham is being assisted by the following committee:

Mrs. Worthington Scranton, Scranton; Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Wilkes-Barre; Mrs. Charles F. Stauffer, Lancaster; Miss Margaret Miller, Wilkes-Barre; Miss Edith Jelden, Philadelphia; Mrs. W. Ellis Groben, Germantown; Mrs. Margaret Keilman, Tamaqua; Mrs. G. Mason Owlett, Wellsville; Mrs. Vlda McClure, Pittsburgh; Mrs. H. M. Shuman, Northumberland; Mrs. E. W. London, Altoona; Mrs. Benjamin Williams, Butler; Mrs. W. E. Geisler, Johnstown; Mrs. Roy Schaich, New Brighton; Mrs. N. R. Hentz, Scranton; Mrs. Harry E. Goodman, Jersey Shore; Mrs. Clarissa Bombeck, Farrell; Mrs. E. Kirby Lawson, Penbrook; Mrs. Gilbert L. Kopley, Robesonia and Mrs. Maude Coleman, Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 1.—Republicans from 22 western counties will be represented at the opening of the campaign in Cambria County Saturday, August 1st, when the Council of Republican Women of that County will stage a great rally on the Fair Grounds at Ebensburg.

Former Congressman Fred W. Davernport, of New York, will represent the National Committee, as speaker. Others invited to address the meeting are Mrs. Worthington Scranton and Senator G. Mason Owlett, National Committee members; State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor, State Vice-Chairman Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Frank L. Pinola, candidate for State Treasurer; E. Arthur Sweeney, candidate for Auditor General, and others. Following a meeting at 11 a. m., lunch will be provided and a social hour will precede the afternoon meeting at 2:30.

"KING OF HEARTS"

BY EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

CHAPTER XXXIV

It was spring now, and the air from the lake was balmy. The gaunt trees grew lacy with new leaf-buds, and frequent gusty showers washed pavements and walls clean of soot. Lynn felt as if life had begun anew for her. The winter seemed so very far away from her here—as far away as Jack was. He ventured into her thoughts often but she dismissed him quickly whenever it was possible. No use to live with a dream that never could come true. She must forget him and build her life without him—concrete and enduring, as Jed had advised her. But there were many times when her thoughts lingered with Jack, delicately, when her heart ached so intolerably for him that it seemed almost to burst with the pain. What was security and happiness, without Jack?

It seemed strange to realize that he never even had kissed her, except that quick firm kiss of his farewell, yet the thought of such a caress flowed over her with warm sweetness. They only had danced together a few times—not as many times even as she had danced with Jed, now; but the memory of them filled her with ecstasy. She remembered the few intimate words he had spoken close to her ear, repeated to herself over and over the insistent pressure of his arm about her.

But he belonged to Doti! Perhaps she never would see him again. It was better not. She was so grateful to Jed that his smallest consideration hurt her, guiltily. She was not blind to what was happening to Jed Townsend. Every small attention he recognized by the older Townsend, whose name was in small gold letters on a closed walnut-paneled door in the much more private regions.

So she delved into her new work with zealous joy, listened intently to instructions and began to sort ledger of necessities, before returning to the more desirable comforts. Jed protested her living in the cheap downtown rooming house. But she was determined to work out her own plan, so he respected her independence. But he contrived to take her to dinner often, suspecting that such small savings to her income, though they were beyond his own comprehension, had their importance. And all the time, he said nothing to her about Jackson Thorpe having sought her in Chicago. There had been some element in the southern man's purpose which made Jed fearful for his own maturing plans, if he discovered where Lynn was. There were times when he felt a little guilty about his secrecy; but a man had to protect his own interests in the face of such obvious competition, didn't he?

Lynn set her dressing case down on the floor and looked about her, dazedly. Was it real, after all? Was she actually back in the comfortable, high-ceilinged room which she had shared with her mother—oh, so very long ago, it must be? It seemed as if centuries must have passed since then. She turned, and smiled with misty eyes at Mrs. Kime who stood in the doorway, her own eyes unashamedly tearful above her own dazed smile. She had planned for Lynn's safe return for so long, that it was difficult to believe she was there, at last.

"I put all your own things back where you used to have them," she said quaveringly. "I thought it would make everything seem more natural to you."

"Oh, you're so good to me!" Lynn threw an impulsive arm about the thin shoulders and pressed her soft glowing cheek to the wrinkled one. "And it's—it's just heavenly to be home again!"

"You never should have gone away," Mrs. Kime shook her head sadly. "We've all been so worried about you!"

"But you shouldn't have. I'm young, and should take care of myself. I couldn't accept more from you than I had, you see. I couldn't come back until I was independent again. I am, now," her voice was soft with a tearful happiness.

"There was a young man here from New Orleans looking for you, more than once," Mrs. Kime told her finally, after they had talked of many things.

Lynn thought instantly of Dewey. He traveled around a great deal. It would be like him to follow her. She was glad to have missed him. "Who was it?"

Mrs. Kime went to her desk and returned with a card, handed it to Lynn.

"Jackson Thorpe!" she read wonderingly, and all the color drained from her face, then rushed back with surging pressure. Her hand went to her throat, helplessly. "Why—why was he here?"

"Said he came to the city on business and your cousin wanted him to look you up. He seemed terribly upset when I didn't know where you were and he made me promise if I saw you or heard from you, I would let him know right away."

So! that was why he had sought her. Doti had sent him to see her, as a casual incident of a business trip. But she wished she might have seen him. Even a glimpse of him, a few words—lost forever. Her heart hammered with a dull thud in his great breast and she felt a great yearning for that lost opportunity.

"I must write to Doti at once. I've neglected everyone shamefully. But I was having a wretched time," she confessed, her eyes lifted to Mrs. Kime's soberly, "and I wanted no one to trouble about me."

Queer, she reflected, how she had stubbornly refused to permit those who loved her and knew her best to protect her; yet in her magnanimous gesture of independence, she had accepted the same assistance from a stranger. What perverted conceit was independence!

"You will write to Mr. Thorpe, then; or shall I?" her landlady inquired anxiously.

Lynn laughed. "I'll write to Doti this very night, which is all the same. Mr. Thorpe was only Doti's personal messenger, and he is very conscientious about doing everything as Doti wishes."

"He seemed real anxious to see you," persistently.

"I'm sorry to have missed him," Lynn said lightly, and added for her reassurance, "but I shall be here the next time he comes looking for me," laughing. Her heart said, "He never will come again."

Mrs. Kime smiled delightedly and bustled away to finish the dinner which had been prepared especially for Lynn's return.

Before she slept that night, Lynn wrote a gay note to Doti, apologizing for her long neglect. She had been away, and very busy, she lied gallantly, not knowing how much they knew of that absence. But she still held in her memory the happiest days of her life, in the lovely old house among the oaks and magnolias. She had now returned to Mrs. Kime's and was happy to be back again.

As Lynn prepared for the night

she felt so very secure and hopeful again. As if her feet were on solid ground and she could take a deep breath without shattering something. The next day was Sunday. Jed had planned a joyous holiday, in spite of her mild protests. They would drive up the lake shore for a country dinner somewhere and return whenever their fancy dictated. Henceforth, he had commanded, she was to rest a great deal and be happy as it was her right to be. His manner was very authoritative, and yet very gentle.

She wondered what she was going to do about Jed. He was such a dear. She was very fond of him and was so happy when she was with him. If it had not been for that stronger revelation, she might suspect that she was falling in love with Jed. And why not? She had as much right to devotion and protection as Doti had, and Doti had Jack. And then the thought of accepting Jed as a substitute made her feel guilty. Jed deserved better than that—being a substitute. That would not be fair to him, surely. And then she dismissed the idea, because she told herself there was plenty of time—years of time—in which to decide so momentous a question. She need not do everything all at once, just because she was free and secure once more.

Her work would absorb most of her time and thought from now on. She wished very soon to take that first upward step which Jed had suggested could be done, with him to show her the way. It was going to be pleasant and gratifying to become more and more important in the affairs of her little world, to build magnificently and enduringly upon her foundation. The foundation with which her mother had provided her so lovingly.

Her thoughts turned to her mother, and her mother's love and all it had ordained for them both. Thinking about that, she wondered why love should be such a devastating thing. It never should be like that, surely. It would not be for Doti.

She was rearranging her possessions, putting things back into their accustomed places. And suddenly, she came upon the little collection of trinkets that were souvenirs of the carnival pageants. Jack's ring gleamed with almost genuine enthusiasm, as she turned it in the light. What if it were her engagement ring from him, she dared to think breathlessly, and slipped it on her finger. It was too large and looked awkward on her slender hand.

It was a misfit, like her love for Jack. And like the ring which she treasured for a tangible reminder and had no other significance whatever, her memories would have to be put away into some remote niche of her consciousness where they would not command her attention so much of the time. She took off the ring, pressed it to her lips impulsively and put it into her jewel box, which had been her mother's and had once held a much more valuable collection than it did now; a single necklace of seed pearls which had been her mother's, a small emerald brooch and a set of matching earrings. She thought, visioning the day when she could afford some new clothes for evening engagements with Jed, that the emerald set would be effective with the right gown. She would remember to use them.

He states in his communication that the attendance has increased materially this year, passing the 300 mark.

ALL IN THE WEEK'S WORK

RADIOS, PAPERS, SONGS AND DANCES, ON THE MARCH OF TIME ADVANCES!

The Olympic Games loom in the news. The "torch" is borne on high—"Sports" is spelt with a capital "S". Strong men and Spartan women try to win the laurels—swimming, racing, Wrestling, jumping and the like—Courage, skill and strength of limb—Power to throw, to win, to strike.

La Jarrett, too, was celebrating. Back-stroked herself right off the team—Turned into a sort of nightmare. Her once rose-lit Olympic dream. Two more suspended—so we read. For some mysterious law-breaking. Too bad this weeding out was left Till so late in the undertaking!

Striving for their country's glory. What of national "fair play"? Between nations, too, the armies, navies, Planning for another fray? Battleships and airships building. Quotas broken, treaties spurned—The lesson of the Greek Olympics. Still the nations haven't learned.

News from Spain, like a Spanish omelet, Consists of this and that and so. The "rights" and "lefts" and "loyalists" Day by day the headlines show. Fascists and Communists and old guard Fighting for the upper hand—The ancient, blood-soaked Alcazar, Sees modern struggles in the land.

"Politics?" Oh, la! la! la! Was there ever more to-do. Many a question needs solution Before the long Depression's through. Taxes cripple new endeavors Hungry citizens protest—Relief and jobless questions linger Evictions, hold-ups and the rest.

The "Queen Mary" made a record run But tragedy dimmed her much sought glory: A brave photographer went out To get a close-up, pictured story. Instead death rode the rolling deep In grave, majestic, silent state And gathered to herself a soul—Who then can know his fate?

The garden blooms, and who shall tell, Which lovely flower will fade—And leave no seed, no memory Beneath the gardener's spade. Nor yet again, what seed, what word, What sudden, long past deed, Will ring across the tides of time With never-ending speed.

To live within the hearts of men
To give forth blossoms sweet and fair—
To sing, to dance, to live, to grow
To something wondrous fine and rare.

LANDRETH NINE PLAYS AT CAPE MAY TODAY

Landreth's Seeds will play the Cape May Collegians at Cape May, N. J., this afternoon.

Sunday at Landreth Ball Park, Holmesburg, of the Quaker City League, will play the "Farmers." Holmesburg defeated the home team in their former appearance here, July 5th, when they won an eleven inning game 2-1.

Playing at Atlantic City, Thursday evening the Landreth's Seeds lost to Johnson's Stars, 8-3.

Paul pitched for Landreth's and was wild and ineffective, especially in the fourth inning when the Stars put over five runs on two bases on balls, a hit batsman and three hits. "Vic" Rockhill injured his knee during practice and will be lost to the "Seeds" for some time, at least.

DISTRIBUTE 60 QUAIL IN LOWER BUCKS CO.

Three hunting and fishing clubs in lower Bucks county this week each received 20 half-grown quail for distribution. The quail raised by the State were distributed by Deputy Game Warden Stackhouse.

The clubs receiving the feathered game birds include the Edgely Rod and Gun Club, the Bristol Fish and Game Association, and the Morrisville Rod and Gun Club.

The quail, which have been reported to be in excellent condition, are being distributed to several portions of the State in an effort to provide larger flocks for the hunters. Pheasants and rabbits have likewise been distributed in past years.

Activities at the Edgely Rod and Gun Club are in full swing and preparations are fast being made for the annual outing. Many of the prominent citizens of Edgely, who are members of the club, have been wielding scythes, getting the grounds in order. The lake has also been cleaned. The committee in charge has issued a summons asking that more of the club's members make it a point to come out to the meetings which are held every Tuesday and Thursday evening at Edgely Park. Workouts are held at these meetings.

Foreign Stars on Olympic Horizon

American supremacy in the Olympic field and track events at Berlin is threatened this year by the strongest contingents of stars other countries have produced in years. Nishida (left) of Japan, is capable of 14 feet or better in the pole-vault. Miss Gisela Mauermeyer (center), German discus and shot-put star, recently set a new women's world record. Juan Zabala, 1932 Olympic marathon winner, has been displaying top form in a recent European tour.

SCIARRA TO SEEK REVENGE IN ARENA

Tally Sciarra will seek revenge in his fight in the St. Ann's outdoor arena, Monday night. Tally is fighting Jimmy Daniels, a colored veteran from the Arena Club. Daniels beat Sciarra at the Philadelphia Arena, Thursday night. This bout is but one of the ten all-star bouts to be presented to the fans of this locality in the St. Ann's regular bi-monthly show which is held under the supervision of the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Sciarra staged a great fight against the veteran Daniels and in the final session floored his opponent with a choppy right. However, the large lead compiled by the colored boy in the first two rounds wasn't overcome. Sciarra feels confident that he can whip the Arena mite and is out to do so.

The boxing show received a slap when it was learned that Johnny Litto would not be able to go through with his scheduled bout with Morris Bracey. Litto was cut up in a bout with Tony Tedesco last week. Matchmaker Patsey Moffa is working on a substitute either for Bracey or a new bout.

Tickets for the show can be secured by calling the St. Ann's clubhouse, 9924.

bronze doors, and the visible outside steel and window grilles are stainless.

Part of the scheduled "trimmings" include floodlights, an emergency generating plant and a short wave radio transmitter. Recently Kentucky let a contract for construction of a concrete highway 1.2 miles long from Dixie Highway 31 to the vault. WPA funds will be used in the work.

While secrecy has been the watchword of the gold transfer, it is understood that the gold bricks will be placed on trains at New York and Philadelphia in sections. Departure and routes of the trains have been kept secret, and all rights-of-way and bridges will be carefully inspected.

The gold, which weighs approximately 11,000,000 pounds, will be mailed through the postoffice department at a cost of 10 cents a pound. Other costs, including loading in the east, unloading at Ft. Knox, guards, and $16,800 worth of money bags run the total to $1,174,800.

About the only thing the government didn't do to make the gold vault safe from any kind of an attack was to run a 20-foot sewer into the depository so it could be flooded with water if and when attacked.

And, even that was rumored when pipes were laid to drain the hole, when thunderstorms spoke their minds. All because the Bank of France is understood to have such a system, although no one seems to know where the Parisians hoard their dust.

NEWTOWN MAY CLINCH SECOND-HALF RACE

Newtown can virtually clinch the second half race of the Delaware River League over the week-end by winning both of its scheduled games. Today the Bruins travel to Lambertville to play the sliding Lambertville Top Rock Club and tomorrow the Burnsman meet Morrisville at Morrisville.

Hulmeville will be at home over the week-end, playing Bordentown, the first half champions today, and tomorrow combatting with the Dolington Cornhuskers. The Hulmeville team seeks revenge on the Eagles today, as two weeks ago, Pete Firce blanked them with four hits, but as Hulmeville was short a player, the Jersey club took the game on forfeit. Firce will again toe the slab against the Westmen.

Dolington, still resting its hopes on a mathematical chance of winning the second half, will play Morrisville tomorrow and Hulmeville today. A double win for the McGarymen, and even one loss to the Newtown team will give them some hope.

Games are scheduled to begin at three o'clock.
